

LIFTING THE LID

Andorra welcomes more than 11 million tourists a year and now more Australians are being encouraged to sample its myriad attractions. Here, Traveltalk looks at 'Europe's best kept secret'.

TAKING THE PISTE

Grandvalira is southern Europe's largest ski resort and will be celebrating its 10th anniversary this season. It is made up of six different access points, contains 118 slopes of all different levels, 210 km skiable area with 64 ski-lifts capable of transporting more than 100,000 visitors per hour.

It also has three snowparks (one of which opens at night) for freestyle and six skiing and snowboarding schools with 400 instructors. And on top of that, Grandvalira has more than 1,000 state-of-the-art snow cannons placed strategically throughout the territory to ensure that at least 65 per cent of the skiable areas are covered in snow.

In addition to skiing, adventure activities such as canyoning, Segway on snow, tubing or laser combat are also available, along with old favourites such as mushing, snow mobiles, heliski or snow shoes.

Off piste, Grandvalira offers a wide range of different places to eat throughout the territory catering for all budgets: from cafeterias, self service restaurants and sandwich and hamburger joints to first class à la carte restaurants.

This season sees a whole host of new venues, particularly the opening of the Cala Bassa Beach Club Pas de la Casa, offering an indoor and outdoor service with a terrace containing tables, hammocks and sofas and a DJ playing music to create a unique environment in Andorra.

Grandvalira-Grau Roig (Cubil) will also welcome AndBurguer Zero, offering a wide range of hamburgers and exquisite 100 per cent Andorran meat while Pasta Box del Gall de Bosc in the Soldeu sector will serve high-quality pasta in a self-service environment.

For top-notch après-ski, head to L'Abarset (Grandvalira-El Tarter), the ideal location for a drink and the parties that will be organised every weekend throughout the skiing season. L'Abarset also has a new terrace this season where skiers can enjoy the best nights once skiing is over for the day.

Two major events will be taking place at the resort in March and April. The Total Fight Masters of Freestyle (Snowboard and Freeski) competitions will be held from March 27-29 and April 3-5 respectively. The best riders in both disciplines will do battle at the Grandvalira-El Tarter snow park, promising two weekends full of spectacular jumps.

The Grandvalira Igloo Hotel is unique in southern Europe and is located at the Coma III Edici Xirixuca de Grandvalira – Grau Roig. It is made entirely of snow and enjoys views over the slopes of Grau Roig. It has a bar, restaurant, five rooms and everything you'll need to enjoy a special night in the snow.
